National Bushfire Conference 2026 Designing the fire-ready future

Across Australia and around the world, communities are confronting a rapidly changing bushfire landscape. Recent fires have once again impacted homes and landscapes, from major fire events across Victoria and Western Australia to more localised fires in Tasmania and New South Wales that have resulted in the loss of homes and threatened established communities. These events highlight that bushfire risk is evolving in increasingly complex and unpredictable ways. At the same time, governments and industry are responding with new planning frameworks, evolving building standards and a renewed focus on how communities are designed and developed in bushfire-prone areas.

The National Bushfire Conference 2026, presented by Fire Protection Association Australia (FPA Australia), is the nation's premier platform dedicated to practical bushfire planning, design and risk mitigation. Under the theme Designing the Fire-Ready Future, the conference will bring together practitioners, policymakers, researchers and industry leaders to explore how Australia can build safer, more resilient communities in the face of increasing bushfire risk.

Drawing on lessons from recent fire seasons and emerging policy reforms, the conference will examine how land-use planning, building design, emergency management and community preparedness must evolve together. A key focus will be on the role of the built environment in reducing risk highlighting how thoughtful planning, improved construction practices and innovative design can significantly improve safety outcomes for communities living in bushfire-prone areas.

The conference will also highlight the important work of BPAD practitioners, whose expertise continues to play a critical role in guiding planning and development decisions across Australia.

In addition to a dynamic program of keynote presentations, panels and technical sessions, the conference will feature a dedicated tradeshow showcasing the latest bushfire protection technologies, materials, systems and services. This exhibition will provide attendees with the opportunity to explore new solutions, engage with industry innovators and discover practical tools that support better bushfire outcomes.

The National Bushfire Conference 2026 is designed for professionals working at the forefront of bushfire risk management, including:

- BPAD accredited bushfire consultants and aspiring bushfire practitioners
- Town planners and land-use professionals
- Building designers, architects and developers
- Emergency services and incident management personnel
- Policymakers and regulators
- Researchers, academics and technical specialists

Together, we will explore how to design, plan and deliver communities that are better prepared for the fires of tomorrow.
